TERRIBLE ACCIDENT AT PHILADELPHIA.

Burning of a Ferry Boat on the Delaware River.

GREAT LOSS OF LIFE.

List of the Dead, Injured and Missing.

INVESTIGATION BY THE CORONER.

From the Philadelphia Ledger, Extra, March 14.

One of the most fearful disasters which have happened upon the Delaware since the burning of the Boston, Penn, some twenty years ago, occurred on Friday night, between 8 and 9 o'clock, to the Camden Ferry boat New-Jersey, belonging to the Philadelphia and Camden Ferry Company, with passengers to the number of twenty one hundred, mostly residents of New-Jersey, started for Camden. When opposite the mouth of the canal, but on reaching that point, Captain COMBY discovered that the ice was so jammed between the banks, that to go through it would be almost an impossibility.

The boat was then turned northward, so as to give her some distance above Smith's Island. When nearly opposite Arch-street Wharf, the boat was discovered to be on fire near the smoke stack. An effort was made to check the flames, but without avail. A scene of wild excitement ensued, the passengers all pressing forward to escape the flames, and to be the first to jump ashore, as soon as the boat should touch the wharf, the Captain having ordered the pilot to steer direct for the Arch-street wharf. Unfortunately, when within thirty feet of the wharf, the boat became fast in the ice, and notwithstanding her steam, could not force her through. A strong ebb tide was running, and carrying her down the river, which caused the boat to shoot off from the wharf, and float towards the island opposite. Behind this time, however, most of the passengers had jumped overboard, some of whom succeeded in getting upon cakes of ice, and others were taken from the water by persons in small boats. The flames spread rapidly, among whom were some of the passengers, who were forced to the water rather than be burned to death. The scene at the boat was one of the most appalling character. Mr. Hayward, of this city, was on board with his wife and child, about fourteen months old; he got separated from his wife when the fire was first discovered. He immediately made search for her; was driving in the midst of the excited throng, was carried overboard without obtaining any knowledge of the whereabouts of his wife and child. He was rescued, and, on reaching the wharf, he was informed for the first time that his wife had been saved and taken to the Weather by Tavern, but the child was drowned. Its mother held on to it until exhaustion compelled her to relinquish her hold.

Mr. NIXON, of Camden, was on board with his wife and child, and both remained on the deck until the steamer took fire. Mrs. NIXON was considerably bruised by the fall from the wheel house, and was separated from her, and forced overboard, his coat was all in a blaze. She has not seen or heard of him since.

Thomas B. DUDLEY, of Camden; THOMAS HOUGH, of Philadelphia; Mrs. ELLEN BROWN, of Camden; Thomas STEARNS and wife, and WM. P. WILSON, were all rescued from the water in an exhausted state, and taken to NEWKIRK's, where the proper restoratives were applied to prevent any serious results.

Mr. JAMES M. SPEARING, of Camden, escaped with his life, notwithstanding the boat passed over him. He was taken from the water he could scarcely move, and was carried home and kindly cared for. His wife and son were pushed off the boat, and while the father escaped with a slight injury to the shoulder, caused by being struck by the paddle wheel, the son was lost. Mr. JAMES THORNTON is a bookbinder, and worked in LIPPINCOTT's bindery, Fifth-street, near Race.

The Injured.

Mrs. NIXON, wife of WARWARSER NIXON, residing in Camden, was on board with her husband and little daughter. Her bonnet was burned off her head and a black silk dress and the underclothing nearly all burned off her. Her face, breast, arms, hands and one side are so terribly burned that her life is despaired of. She jumped overboard and was saved after sinking twice. Mrs. N. was taken to RANE's Hotel, in Water street, above Race, where she was attended by Drs. BOWMAN and HAYWARD of this city. Her daughter was saved and is with her mother yesterday. Mr. W. NIXON was beside her when she jumped, but after reaching the water lost him. He has not been heard of since.

LEVI HAWKEN, of Cooper's Hill, N. J., was burned about the face, arms and legs, and bruised on the breast by being struck by the paddle wheel. He was with his brother, JOHN S. HAWKEN, who was so badly burned as to be injured. Levi, after a hard and after falling overboard, went forty rods before he was taken out. He was rescued from the water by persons in a small boat. The brothers succeeded in getting on board the boat, and were taken off in a small boat.

Mr. WM. CAMPBELL, of Camden, received a few moments of the falling

the depot in New-York at 5 o'clock, for the purpose of returning home, but found that that line had been discontinued.

THEODORE HEWITT, a man about 30 years of age, had his head and hands badly burned, and his body bruised. He was picked out of the water in a senseless condition, and taken to RANE's Hotel. Mr. H. is a resident of Chew's Landing, and was going to Camden to visit a friend.

THOMAS DUDLEY, Esq., of Camden, was an hour and a half in the water, before taken out in a small boat.

Mr. EDWARDS, of Camden, was struck by paddle wheel and cut on the cheek.

Mr. CRISPIN, of Camden, cut on head by wheel, and burned about the head.

Mr. NAGLE, of Camden, had his hands badly burned. He remained on the steamboat until within a few feet of Arch-street wharf.

GODFREY OSTERHARP, of Camden, was badly burned.

Mr. STEES, of Camden, was burned in the back. Himself and wife were saved by jumping on the ice.

HENRY LELARGE, 28 years of age, resided in Fourth-street, near Taylor's avenue. Has a wife and three children; was a cigar maker, and worked for Mr. VETTERLEIN, North Second-street, Philadelphia.

Miss ELIZABETH FULLERTON, 20 years of age, resided in Broadway, Cooper's Hill, Camden. Her father is FRANCIS FULLERTON, hat finisher. Before this young lady reached the water she is said to have uttered the most piteous cries for help, and fell exhausted overboard.

MYER REITNACK, German, a barber by trade, and doing business in Camden.

GEORGE ESSENHARDT, German, resident of Camden.

A colored man, from South Camden, named RUTH is also missing.

Miss MARY E. MABRY, aged 15 years, a resident of Camden. Her father was at the Market-street Ferry, yesterday, much distressed.

A young man, named WM. YOUNG, held on to the railing of the boat until his hand was burnt so badly that he was compelled to jump overboard, and after swimming for some time, was picked up by a small boat.

A German was taken off the paddle box—his hair was singed, and his coat burned. He had a bag of bread with him, which he held on to, and took it home none the worse for the accident.

The excitement along the river front yesterday was great, hundreds of persons standing upon the wharves, and crossing at the Market-street Ferry, to get a glimpse of the ill-fated steamer, which is sunk on a bar above the old Water Works wharf, nothing being visible but one of the paddle-boxes and the walking-beam.

Miss JOSEPHINE FIDELL, 18 years of age, was saved in a small boat sent out from a schooner. One of the men in the boat saw her floating under the surface of the water, and diving down brought her up. She was taken to OURKIN's Susquehanna Hotel, Water and Vine streets, injured about the face and arms. This young lady was with her father on the ferry boat. When the destruction of the steamer was found to be inevitable, her father, Mr. JOHN FIDELL, secured a rope and tied it to one of the stanchions, in the hope that should it fall into the river it would be the means of saving their lives. They staid on board until the fire became too hot to remain longer, and then jumped with the rope, to which they clung until the flames burned it off. Miss F. then lost her father, and has not heard of him since. She resides in South Camden, where her friends took her yesterday morning.

A young man, living in Thirteenth-street, above Cherry, was picked up by Capt. ROBINSON, THOMAS O'DONNELL and another man, who had a boat, and did great service in rescuing the afflicted from watery graves. They brought eight men and two women ashore in their boat. This young man is said to be a clerk in COMLY's store. His neck, hands and face are badly burned. His coat was burnt off his back. He was taken home by one of his rescuers.

F. HOWARD, a clerk in BAZIN's perfumery establishment, was slightly injured. He jumped overboard with a bench, and kept himself up until taken out in a boat. He was on the steamboat Sanford all night.

The Missing.

As far as ascertained, the following named persons were missing from their families this (Sunday) morning:

SAMUEL BIRCHS, resided in Penn-street, above Fifth, Camden. Tailor in Fourth-street, above Arch, Philadelphia. Has a wife and four children.

JOHN PARSONS, resided in Penn-street. The proprietor of a restaurant in Chesnut-street, Philadelphia. Has a wife and one child. Is 68 years old.

CHARLES WETHERBY, 18 years of age, resided in Second-street, near Bridge-avenue, Camden. Was employed in GARMAN's planing-mill, in that city.

Miss SALLY GARMAN, 25 years of age, daughter of WILLIAM GARMAN, Broadway and Bridge-avenue, Camden.

Mr. BEALE, a clerk in LEVY's store, Chesnut-street, Philadelphia, resided in Stevens-street, near Third. Has a wife and two children.

Mr. FRENCH resided in Stevens-street, near Fourth, south side. His quarterly ferry-ticket, pocket-book and receipts, were found this morning, and are said to be in the possession of Mr. MASTER, at Kensington Screw Dock.

EDWARD MUSCHAMP, 35 years of age, a book-keeper in the Camden and Amboy Railroad Company. Mr. M. resided in Fourth-street, below Mickle, in Camden; has a wife and four children. At the time of the collision on the Camden and Amboy Railroad, near South-Bridge, 7 miles from Amboy, in July, 1853, Mr. M. was conductor on one of the trains. The wife of the missing man went to New-York on Saturday, to attend the funeral of a friend.

The body of a little girl was found floating in the river, near the island, this morning.

Investigation by the Coroner.

A Jury of Inquest, consisting of CHARLES W. PACKER, CHARLES S. CALVERT, RUDOLPH HAMPTON, WM. H. BROWN, BENJAMIN MASTERS and THOMAS HARTSHORNE, was summoned by Coroner DELAVAN to investigate the facts of this sad disaster. After viewing the bodies of ABRAHAM JANNIS and JOHN LITTLE, at Arch-street wharf, and the Twelfth Ward Station-house, the investigation was commenced at NEWKIRK's Hotel.

TESTIMONY OF THE CAPTAIN.

William S. Corson, of Camden, being sworn—I was Captain of the steamboat New-Jersey; she was so built in the Summer of 1855; she was a substantial boat, and had not been cut through; the laws of the United States do not require ferry boats to keep life preservers and life-boats we left Walnut-street wharf at half past eight; we went into the canal, but the ice being too heavy we were compelled to go around the Island; were about Arch-street wharf, when an alarm of fire was given; I told Mr. STARKING, the pilot, that we would make Arch-street wharf; we steered for the wharf; when about two lengths I went down to take a line ashore; at that time the upper deck was all in a blaze; I got down and had the line in my hand when the boat took a sheer off from the wharf, the passengers then attempted to leap off, some few longing to the wharf; I leaped off when the boat was about 100 yards from the wharf; I got on to a cake of ice, and the hands on board the Morning Light threw me a line! there was a gentleman about 20 feet from me, and I threw the rest of the line to him, and we were both saved. I should judge there were from 75 to 100 persons on board; the boat was originally built about fifteen years ago; I take the fares at the gate, but, having made a trip before, the money for both trips became mixed together; I have not counted the money, and suppose I must have lost part of it, so that the money would be but little guide in judging of the number on board; the hands on the shipping generally aided us in every way, but a small tug passed when the boat was in a light blaze, without stopping; one of the passengers was the first to discover the fire; I have no idea how the fire caught; the space around the smoke stack, which it commenced, was protected by sheet iron, which I consider sufficient, as the only heat there would be from the steam; coal was burned in her furnaces; the boat was provided with water buckets; there were no boats on board; the boat was owned by the Philadelphia and Camden Ferry Company; it is separate from the Camden and Amboy Railroad Company, with different directors; the boiler was examined by the Inspector of Boilers about three months since; the boat was only used at night, except on emergencies; we carried the same amount of steam last night as usual; there was no extra firing; there was no cotton waste on board; the cloths used in wiping the machinery were kept in the forward part of the boat; a number of passengers leaped overboard at the first alarm of fire; when I leaped off I saw no one on board; the flame and smoke had driven them all off, though I suppose there were several burned up in her; there were a few loose benches on the deck, which were made use of by the passengers in saving themselves; the seats in the cabins were permanent; I should judge there were from 25 to 30 females on board; I saw a number of ladies leap overboard and some got upon a bench that was thrown over by a gentleman; the boat went through the canal in coming to the city, but it being flood tide a large cake of ice had drifted in; we tried ten minutes before giving up the attempt; the foreman spends part of the time on deck; there was a foreman named FRANCISCO in the fire-room at the time; he was not the regular foreman; the man employed was not there at the time; the engineer was on board, until driven away by the fire; I do not consider it the duty of the foreman to be always in the fire-room; used oil lamps on board, and the wood work above is painted; I was on deck to change the pilot of the rudder, necessary in returning to the upper deck; I passed the spot where the fire subsequently broke out; I saw no fire, nor did I smell any smoke; there was a sheet-iron case six or eight inches from the smoke stack, fastened to the wood work; I have been attached to the boat about five years, and never had any idea of danger from the boat taking fire; there was a horse and wagon on board; I suppose the horse perished in the flames; the owner of the wagon, a Mr. SHARP, was saved; his wife and child were lost; the foreman was named JESTER; he was injured, and is now over at Camden.

TESTIMONY OF THE PILOT.

John Springer, of Camden, the pilot, deposed—We left Walnut-street to go through the Canal, but the ice having jammed there I went to the other pilot-house and steered while she backed out; the alarm of fire was given when opposite Arch-street, and we made for that wharf; when within two hundred rods of the wharf the steering apparatus became useless, I suppose from the wood work burning away from the chain and rods; all the hands on board, few in number, were saved; the boiler was protected from the wood work in the usual manner; the fire came up amidships; I saw the flames come up alongside the smoke stack; the boat was not jarred by striking the ice; there was a young man, named CHAS. NIXON, a printer by trade, on board, and was in the pilot-house with me; he was saved; the ash-pan above the boiler was removed since the boat was rebuilt; the ash-pan has a stream of water running through it; it is the duty of the foreman to keep this supply of water running.

TESTIMONY OF THE ENGINEER.

Barney Carter, of Camden, the engineer, deposed—After leaving Walnut-street, the pilot thought it best to go around the canal; the alarm of fire was given when near opposite Arch-street; I tried to drive through, but the ice prevented me; the boat was headed for Arch-street wharf, and the bell was rung to go fast; the fire would not let me get into the engine-room, but with my foot I kicked the cut-off, so that the engine would go at full stroke; she came straight for the wharf, when the pilot was driven from the pilot-house; I first discovered the fire coming through where the steam chimney came through the deck; the fire, I think, came from below, apparently from something burning beneath the deck; I can stand at the engine and see the fire-room and the furnace door; the furnace is at a distance of two feet from any wood-work; the boat I understand to be the property of the Camden and Philadelphia Steamboat Ferry Company; there was no extra steam or fire on previous to the fire; there was no fire-wood or kindling beneath the deck; the upper-deck is about fourteen feet above the main-deck; the steam-chimney comes about three or four feet above the main-deck; there is a casing around this, at a distance from the wood-work; the ash-pan extends eighteen inches beyond the furnace door; when the fire broke out I put the fireman at the engine and went below; the deck above the boiler was then on fire; we were in the canal about ten minutes before the boat was backed out; FRANCISCO was below at that time; he had not seen the fire when I went below; the boiler and the wood work around it had been inspected by the regular inspector, who gave a certificate that all was sound and safe; I think the boat was built in 1854 or 1855. I have been on her about one year.

TESTIMONY OF ONE OF THE DIRECTORS.

John C. Bullitt, Esq., one of the Directors of the Ferry Company, deposed that the boat belonged to the Camden and Philadelphia Steamboat Company; I am a Director, and represent about one-fourth of the stock; the only connection that the boat had with the Camden and Amboy Railroad Company was the carrying over crates belonging to the way-lines; some of the Directors of the Ferry Company are also Directors of the Camden and Amboy Company but there is no connection between the two Companies. The Company, he stated, were anxious to ascertain where the responsibility of the accident rested and would aid the investigation as far as laid in their power.

The inquest was then adjourned to meet at the call of the Coroner.

PHILADELPHIA, Sunday, March 16.

Nothing definite is yet known as to the number of lives lost. Three bodies have been recovered, and recognized as the remains of JOHN LITTLE, Camden; ABRAHAM JANNIS and FRANCIS FITZPATRICK. Among the missing are the following: SALLY GARMAN, of Camden; EDW. MUSCHAMP, formerly conductor on the Amboy Railroad; JOHN FIDELL, of Camden; MATTHEW MILLER, Jr., broker; Mr. HOWARD, clerk; Mrs. SHARP and child; an infant daughter of SAMUEL GIVERSON, Philadelphia, and a large number of colored persons. The boat belonged to the Philadelphia and Camden Ferry Company.

The loss of life is chiefly owing to the neglect of the Company to furnish the boat with small boats and life preservers, not one of either being on board. Capt. JAMES ROBINSON saved eight men and two ladies in a boat launched with the assistance of another person. It is feared that the loss of life will reach thirty. Many leaped into the water with their clothes on fire. When Miss CARMAN was last seen her clothing was in a blaze.

The origin of the fire is unknown. The flames burst suddenly from the fire room, and spread almost instantly. The pilot house fell in as the boat was nearing the wharf, which disarranged the tiller chains and rendered the boat unmanageable. The bow shoved off from the wharf, the engine could not be stopped, the engineer having been driven from his post by the flames, and the boat carried the passengers remaining on board away from the land.

PERILOUS VOYAGE OF THE ARABIA.

ENCOUNTERS WITH ICE FIELDS.

Narrow Escape from an Enormous Iceberg.

RECKLESS RUNNING THROUGH FOG AND ICE.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

LONDON, Friday, Feb. 29, 1856.

We left Boston on the 19th of February; had an uncommonly fine run to Halifax—arriving there at midnight of the 16th. Nothing had been heard of the Pacific, and there were additional reports of ice met with by coasters. Leaving Halifax on the morning of the 5th, it was understood to be the intention of the captain to take us far to the southward, in hopes to keep below the ice.

Reaching the Banks, we took southeasterly winds, and encountered thick fogs, and thus we were running, during Sunday forenoon, the 17th, heading southeasterly, carrying maintopsail, reefed foretopsail, and all fore-and-aft sails, with a fair strong wind, and going very rapidly, fourteen miles an hour, I believe, by the log—the fog all the time so dense that vision of the sea extended seldom so far as the ship's own length before us.

It was chilly, damp, and altogether unpleasant on deck, the ship plunging and rolling a good deal, and few of the passengers showing themselves. The captain stood constantly under the lee of the weather paddle-box, looking ahead; the officer of the deck walked near him, keeping his eyes on the look outs, two of whom stood at the cat-heads and one on each paddle-box. Another man was stationed near the mainmast, and the third and fourth officers relieved each other as quarter-masters, near the wheel. No other precautions were taken. No bell, no gong, no steam whistling, no gun firing, and the remainder of the watch on deck were permitted to lounge as usual under shelter. Thus we went driving on more rapidly than the Arctic or the Vesta before their fatal collision, and with less precaution—less precaution, but not less vigilance.

I think it was about 9 o'clock; I was standing between the paddle-boxes with a friend, looking forward, when I heard the captain quietly say to the officer of the deck: "All hands, Sir, shorten sail." At the same moment he stepped backwards and touched the engineer's alarm bell.

The lookouts had said nothing; the wind had not increased; the fog not thickened. "What can this be for?" said I, looking to windward. The watch on deck were slowing up, men standing by sheets and halyards, and the boatswain was piping up the sleepers, when I cast my eye forward on the turbid water. "Yes, there is a bit of ice;" it was not larger than a tumbler; "it's the first I have seen, and there is another—oh! that is what the captain saw; he is afraid we are approaching a body of it. There—there! there is more; oh, there it is, plenty of it!"

"Hard-a-port!" shouted the captain in a voice to be remembered. "Hard-a-port!" was repeated aft; the engineer's bell sounded "stop, turn back;" the sails, during attack or dropped idly, but in a moment the ship was rushing, yet at full speed, into the midst of floes of ice; in another moment clear water was beyond our vision on any side.

The captain rang "stop," and the engine rested as the ice struck the paddles. After the ship had lost headway, they were again turned forward slowly, while the crew furled the sails. Slowly we parted the surging surface of ice, which was so broken that the pieces averaged in size not larger than a bucket; slowly moved on, heading southwest, until at length we ran out into clear water again. About fifteen minutes afterwards, the look-outs forward shouted "More ice!" The helm was put down to bring the wind against us; paddles stopped and backed, as before; but again, though we were then moving much more slowly, we had presently run some ship's lengths, I judged, into the "field." Again the ship's course was made southwest, and the engineer's bell was rung to turn forward slowly. I walked to the stern and leaned over the counter to see if the paddles were at all injured. While I was in this position I heard an exclamation, and, raising my head, beheld the most frightful object that in more than fifty thousand miles sea-sailing I ever encountered—right abreast of us, and not a hundred yards distant, yet spectral in the fog, a dead, ghastly and unblemished white iceberg, just about as large above water as the City Hall in New-York.

We passed it quickly and silently; many of those on deck, even, did not see it; a few minutes afterwards the ship ran into clear water, and we went driving on, still heading towards Boston, however, at full speed. An hour later we, passengers, went to our dinner. The steward had exerted himself as usual on Sunday, Champaigne flowed freely, the ladies who were well enough perfidiously kissed Charlotte of Russia, and then demolished calf-foot Malakoffs, and Blanc-mange Rodons highly creditable to the ship's confectioner. The Jews and Gentiles withheld for the day, by the good law of the sea, from their usual recreation of gambling, exerted themselves to unusual hilarity, to kill the tiresome old enemy, Time. If, approaching from windward, we had run upon the berg we had so closely shaved, as we first did into the field-ice, beyond a doubt, every man and woman of us would ourselves have been, long before dinner-time, food for codfishes and perhaps back again in New-York, trying the thin skin of our spiritual knuckles on the mahogany of "Mrs. JONES' Medium."

We ran southwesterly till 6 o'clock, when the temperature of the water was found to be 29° Farenheit warmer than at 4. We then came back to our southeast course. At 9 o'clock the fog had become a mere haze; at 12 it was clear, we were off the banks, were carrying sail, and the captain had left the deck.

Had we in the circumstances, under which we were running before we first saw the ice, met the disaster of the Arctic and had the Captain of the Arabia, afterwards reached New-York alive, it would have gone hard with him, if his life were not demanded as the only meet punishment for such recklessness. For he was driving his ship with all the speed he could command blindly forward in the fog and it would, at any time, have been quite impossible to avoid a collision with anything first seen directly before her. Only the usual night lookouts were set. Before, when I have been crossing the Banks, in fog, even when no ice was apprehended, men have been placed aloft and even on the bowsprit-end, and the ship's bell constantly rung and the steam-whistle sounded at short intervals. Even in sailing vessels I have seen these precautions taken as far as possible. Such precautions had been taken, if I recollect rightly, by the master of the Arctic and of the Vesta; yet the master of the Arctic was most severely and incessantly berated by hundreds of scribling landsmen, because he did not use them more freely and constantly. That was the judgment of wiseacres after disaster.

Before we reached Liverpool, a paper was drawn and largely signed by our passengers—denouncing the recklessness of Captain STORS, of the Arabia! Not at all: but complaining, in the usual fulsome manner of such "testimonials," his success in getting his ship safely through the ice, and enumerating, as his, every imaginable qualification of the perfect shipmaster, inn-keeper, hospital nurse, ladies' cavalier, and good fellows' companion.

I declined to sign it. Need I say why? There are occasions in which the testimony of passengers to the sobriety, watchfulness, coolness and untiring energy of a shipmaster, may be of essential service to him, proper, useful and commendable; but in the majority of cases these testimonials are given by men who know as much of seamanship as a sow does of Theology, and yet pass judgment upon grave points which the most accomplished seamen would hesitate over. Under such circumstances these testimonials simply make the unfortunate object of them ridiculous in the eyes of those whose judgment is of consequence to him.

That Capt. STORS neglected all advisable precautions to avoid collisions, while running in the fog, in this much frequented water, I do not mean to assert—that is a fair question for a seaman's judgment; I only say he neglected some of the usual precautions, and I believe if he had not been successful, instead of receiving public credit for his skill and judgment, he would have been most severely and universally reprimanded. I defended Captain LOCK, in the columns of the TIMES, against similar accusations, at the time of the Arctic disaster, (though I by no means justified his conduct subsequently,) and, if there were occasion, I would apologize for Captain STORS. Fortunately, no one thinks of blaming him at all.

Let it, nevertheless, what I have said should seem to reflect injuriously upon Captain STORS, I am glad to add that there is no ship-master afloat to whose care I would prefer to trust a dear friend; that I have never known a ship-master who inspired me with so much confidence, and that, if I were obliged to cross the Atlantic again, in the Winter, I would put myself so much inconvenience to sail under his command, rather than that of any one else. And, as to the Arabia, I am sailor enough to have been delighted with her—positively delighted. I have never seen the vessel I would prefer to trust myself in to her, unless it were one fitted, as was the Vesta, (to her salvation,) as is the new Havre steamer Fulton, and sails to be, (am I not right?) the new Collins steamer, with water tight bulkheads. I would gladly have quadrupled my passage-money to have had the Arabia so fitted when I first raised my eyes and saw that berg; and I advise all who can, in planning to go to Europe, to so fix their departure that it shall be in a bulkheaded steamer.

As to the minor, but still highly important, question of discomfort; the Arabia was deficient in one or two exceedingly trivial particulars, on the whole was wonderfully well provided with everything she could carry to relieve the inevitable wretchedness (to most persons) of a Winter's Atlantic passage. The officers, crew, engineers, stokers and stewards constantly excited my admiration by their modesty and conscientiousness.

Captain STORS has been held up to public odium in American papers for his silence and want of companionship with his passengers. Commend me to the ship-master who bears this reputation. Capt. STORS is a modest man, and a quiet, but watchful, vigilant, and the best disciplinarian by far that I have ever seen. He did not speak to me once on the passage, though I had a seat at his table, but I saw him most kindly attentive to the ladies, and when he had occasion to address a passenger, invariably courteous and accomplished in word and manner. After we got inside of Cape Clear, with calm, fair weather, he made a fine short speech in reply to the toast in his honor, and in the afternoon hilarity, sung a good song, confidently and loudly, when called upon. He is a good fellow, I'll be bound, but he understands better than most ship-masters the real responsibility upon him.

THE DISASTER TO THE SHIP SHOOTING STAR.

BOSTON, Saturday, March 15.

The ship Empire, HENRY, from Hondula, via Pernambuco, arrived at New-Bedford, this afternoon. She reports that the ship Shooting Star was ashore near Pernambuco, but had got off slightly hogged. CHARLESTON, S. C., Saturday, March 15.

A large meeting was held in this city, last night, to promote emigration to Kansas. An address and resolutions were adopted declaring Slavery to be a political element of the confederacy, inseparable with the present system of government, and claiming the right to promote emigration to Kansas as private individuals, but disclaiming any State attempt at armed intervention in the affairs of Kansas. Committees were appointed to collect funds, &c.

The Court of Common Pleas this morning decided that so far as it had been made to appear to the Court, no divorce had been granted to Mr. GRISWOLD.

In the Supreme Court, the appeal of a liquor-dealer for reversion of sentence of imprisonment, for violating the Sunday Liquor law, was denied, and the judgment of the Court below affirmed.

Fire at Norfolk, Va.

NORFOLK, Va., Saturday, March 15.

The dwelling of Captain SAWYER, Collector at this port, was destroyed by fire last night, and the family barely escaped with their lives.

Mr. HOWARD and another gentleman were with me in the water. I hung on until I could sustain myself no longer, when I committed myself to the waves, with a prayer that God would permit me to see my wife and children once more.

I struck out towards the shore, but I did not know what shore, I was so bewildered. I swam until I was near the wharf, on which people were standing. I felt as if I was about to sink, when they cried out to me to not give up. This encouraged me. I made a fresh struggle, and succeeded in catching a rope. My strength was almost gone, but I hung on desperately, and was finally landed, some of my finger nails being torn off by my efforts to grasp the rope. I do not know what became of my companions who had hold of the rudder-chains.

Mr. Wm. H. Yeaton's Statement.

Mr. YEATON was at Bloodgood's Hotel, and very much exhausted, having been in the water over half an hour. He states that when the fire was discovered the greater part of the passengers rushed towards the bow of the boat, which became very much crowded. He supposed that there were a hundred, at least, on board. Many jumped overboard at the first alarm, and he imagines that most of them were struck by the wheels of the boat. He remained on board until the flames became insupportable. He finally dived down as deep as he could urge himself, and succeeded in getting clear of the wheel, although as he was rising his hat was struck by one of the paddles. He then swam towards the shore, and succeeded in laying hold of the outwater of a vessel. He called for help, and was thrown a rope, which he fastened in a loop around his shoulder, and was drawn on board. He thinks that at least one-half of the passengers were killed by the paddle-wheels, burnt or drowned. There were several ladies on board.

The Dead.

Mr. JOHN C. LITTLE, a resident of Camden, was picked up by three persons in a small boat, dead. When the body was first seen it was floating beneath the surface of the water. His head and hands were burned and breast bruised. He was taken to Vine-street wharf and given in charge of the Seventh District police, who removed him to the station house in Dillwyn-street. The deceased was a harness maker, and worked in a shop in Market-street, Philadelphia. He was 28 years of age, and has left a wife and three children.

ABRAHAM JANNIS, a wheelwright by trade, in the employ of BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, of Dock-street, was taken from the water and removed to HEPBURN's Hotel, Arch-street wharf. He appeared to have been killed by a blow upon the forehead, from the wheel of the boat or in striking a cake of the ice. He leaves a wife living in Camden, on Bridge-avenue.

FRANCIS THORNTON, thirteen years of age, was drowned. He resided with his father, JAMES THORNTON, in Fourth-street, near Mickle, in Camden; and at the time of the calamity was with his father on board the boat. While the crowd was rushing forward, Mr. T. had his son by the hand, waiting a favorable opportunity to jump overboard. Passenger was crying piteously, and called for aid. The father and son were pushed off the boat, and while the father escaped with a slight injury to the shoulder, caused by being struck by the paddle wheel, the son was lost. Mr. JAMES THORNTON is a bookbinder, and worked in LIPPINCOTT's bindery, Fifth-street, near Race.

The Injured.

Mrs. NIXON, wife of WARWARSER NIXON, residing in Camden, was on board with her husband and little daughter. Her bonnet was burned off her head and a black silk dress and the underclothing nearly all burned off her. Her face, breast, arms, hands and one side are so terribly burned that her life is despaired of. She jumped overboard and was saved after sinking twice. Mrs. N. was taken to RANE's Hotel, in Water street, above Race, where she was attended by Drs. BOWMAN and HAYWARD of this GRIGG. Her daughter was saved and is with her mother yesterday. Mr. W. NIXON was beside her when she jumped, but after reaching the water lost him. He has not been heard of since.

LEVI HAWKEN, of Cooper's Hill, N. J., was burned about the face, arms and legs, and bruised on the breast by being struck by the paddle wheel. He was with his brother, JOHN S. HAWKEN, who was so badly burned as to be injured. Levi, after a hard and after falling overboard, went forty rods before he was taken out. He was rescued from the water by persons in a small boat. The brothers succeeded in getting on board the boat, and were taken off in a small boat.

Mr. WM. CAMPBELL, of Camden, received a few moments of the falling

THEODORE HEWITT, a man about 30 years of age, had his head and hands badly burned, and his body bruised. He was picked out of the water in a senseless condition, and taken to RANE's Hotel. Mr. H. is a resident of Chew's Landing, and was going to Camden to visit a friend.

THOMAS DUDLEY, Esq., of Camden, was an hour and a half in the water, before taken out in a small boat.

Mr. EDWARDS, of Camden, was struck by paddle wheel and cut on the cheek.

Mr. CRISPIN, of Camden, cut on head by wheel, and burned about the head.

GODFREY OSTERHARP, of Camden, was badly burned.

Mr. STEES, of Camden, was burned in the back. Himself and wife were saved by jumping on the ice.

HENRY LELARGE, 28 years of age, resided in Fourth-street, near Taylor's avenue. Has a wife and three children; was a cigar maker, and worked for Mr. VETTERLEIN, North Second-street, Philadelphia.

Miss ELIZABETH FULLERTON, 20 years of age, resided in Broadway, Cooper's Hill, Camden. Her father is FRANCIS FULLERTON, hat finisher. Before this young lady reached the water she is said to have uttered the most piteous cries for help, and fell exhausted overboard.

MYER REITNACK, German, a barber by trade, and doing business in Camden.

GEORGE ESSENHARDT, German, resident of Camden.

A colored man, from South Camden, named RUTH is also missing.

Miss MARY E. MABRY, aged 15 years, a resident of Camden. Her father was at the Market-street Ferry, yesterday, much distressed.

A young man, named WM. YOUNG, held on to the railing of the boat until his hand was burnt so badly that he was compelled to jump overboard, and after swimming for some time, was picked up by a small boat.

A German was taken off the paddle box—his hair was singed, and his coat burned. He had a bag of bread with him, which he held on to, and took it home none the worse for the accident.

The excitement along the river front yesterday was great, hundreds of persons standing upon the wharves, and crossing at the Market-street Ferry, to get a glimpse of the ill-fated steamer, which is sunk on a bar above the old Water Works wharf, nothing being visible but one of the paddle-boxes and the walking-beam.

Miss JOSEPHINE FIDELL, 18 years of age, was saved in a small boat sent out from a schooner. One of the men in the boat saw her floating under the surface of the water, and diving down brought her up. She was taken to OURKIN's Susquehanna Hotel, Water and Vine streets, injured about the face and arms. This young lady was with her father on the ferry boat. When the destruction of the steamer was found to be inevitable, her father, Mr. JOHN FIDELL, secured a rope and tied it to one of the stanchions, in the hope that should it fall into the river it would be the means of saving their lives. They staid on board until the fire became too hot to remain longer, and then jumped with the rope, to which they clung until the flames burned it off. Miss F. then lost her father, and has not heard of him since. She resides in South Camden, where her friends took her yesterday morning.

A young man, living in Thirteenth-street, above Cherry, was picked up by Capt. ROBINSON, THOMAS O'DONNELL and another man, who had a boat, and did great service in rescuing the afflicted from watery graves. They brought eight men and two women ashore in their boat. This young man is said to be a clerk in COMLY's store. His neck, hands and face are badly burned. His coat was burnt off his back. He was taken home by one of his rescuers.

F. HOWARD, a clerk in BAZIN's perfumery establishment, was slightly injured. He jumped overboard with a bench, and kept himself up until taken out in a boat. He was on the steamboat Sanford all night.

The Missing.

As far as ascertained, the following named persons were missing from their families this (Sunday) morning:

ALBANY, Friday, March 14, 1856.

In the Assembly, this morning, among the petitions presented were two for the appointment of a Committee to examine the affairs of the Harlem Railroad Company; two remonstrances from the New-York Fire Department against the bill providing for the election of a Fire Marshal by the Department; also, two against the Broadway Railroad.

Mr. VAN SANTVOORD presented a series of resolutions adopted by the Common Council of Troy, respecting the stock of the old Troy and Schenectady Railroad, in the Central Consolidation, and urging the adoption of Mr. KERNAN'S resolution of inquiry as to the manner of the consolidation.

WOMEN'S RIGHTS.

Mr. WARNER, during reports from Standing Committees, called upon the Judiciary Committee for a report on the bill relative to the rights of married women, which was referred to them.

Mr. FOOT then reported adversely to the bill, upon the ground that the present laws are sufficient. When on motion of Mr. WARNER the report was laid on the table, and the bill ordered printed.

Mr. FOOT also submitted a report with reference to the petitions for equal rights to women.

The report represents the Judiciary Committee to be composed of married men and bachelors—the latter, from motives of delicacy, waiving all connection with the subject, left it for the consideration of the married men of the Committee.

Judge FOOT, as the representative of that part of the Committee, submits as the result of his experience, that ladies are always favored with the choicest bits at the table, the best seat in traveling, the warmest situation in Winter and the coolest in Summer. They have also the choice as to the side of the bed they will occupy—the front or back. Their dress costs three times as much as that of man, and with the present style they occupy three times as much room! They therefore come to the conclusion that the males are the greatest sufferers, though they do not apply for redress, having made up their mind to submit to an inevitable destiny. On the whole the Committee have concluded to recommend no measure, except that in cases where both husbands and wives have signed the petitions, the parties be advised to apply for a law to allow them to change their dress, the husband wearing the petticoats, and the wife the breeches, that they may thus indicate the true relation in which they stand to each other.

This singular (!) report was agreed to, with but slight objections from one or two members.

Mr. G. A. DUBLEY, from the minority of the Select Committee to which was referred the bill to repeal the Act, "for the Suppression of Intemperance, Pauperism and Crime," submitted a report in opposition to that of the majority, made some days since. The minority deprecate any action until the decision of the Court of Appeals, and take strong ground against the bill reported by the majority. The report had already been ordered printed.

COMMISSIONERS OF IMMIGRATION.

A communication was received from the Commissioners of Emigration, asking an appropriation to meet the expenses arising from the falling-off of emigration.

THE METROPOLITAN GAS COMPANY.

Mr. ROSS, from the Judiciary Committee, to whom was referred the petition of sundry citizens and taxpayers of the City of New-York, for the repeal of the Act entitled "An Act to incorporate the Metropolitan Gas Light Company of the City of New-York," presented a report. The Committee state that they have heard counsel in behalf of petitioners, and examined Mr. JAMES BOWEN, the President of the Company. They see no reason why the Company should have applied for a special charter. They withhold all expression of opinion as to the constitutionality of the law, which question is now pending in the Courts.

They find the act of incorporation, however, to contain extraordinary and unwise provisions, which ought to be materially modified or repealed.

ALBANY, Saturday, March 15, 1856.

In the Senate, Mr. BROOKS presented the remonstrance of George Wood, Greene C. Bronson, Samuel Beardsley, Daniel Lord, Charles P. Kirkland, Ambrose L. Jordan, Lewis E. Chatfield, Edward P. Cowles, James T. Brady, and other members of the New-York Bar, against the repeal of the act authorizing the election of an additional Judge of the Supreme Court in the First Judicial District. They give as the principal reason why it should not be repealed, (among several others,) that "the particular case sought to be affected by the proposed repeal does not call for legislation, general or special, inasmuch as the Constitution and laws of the State and the ordinary course and practice of all higher Courts furnish simple and speedy remedies.

BRIDGING THE NIAGARA AT BUFFALO.

Mr. RICHARDSON reported, from the Committee on Roads and Bridges, a bill to incorporate the International Bridge Company, from some point in the city of Buffalo to some point near Fort Erie, in Canada—said Bridge to have two draws of ample width to pass any steamboat, one across Black Rock Harbor and the other across the main channel near the Canada shore. Hutch and Edwin Thomas, all of Buffalo, and are to meet on the first Tuesday in June to open the books, and may adjourn from time to time and from place to place in the County of Erie—any adjournment not to be for a longer time than one week.

BRIDGES OVER THE HARLEM.

Mr. FENTON introduced a bill in relation to bridges over the Harlem River. It gives to the Counties of New-York and Westchester, or either, or any other body corporate, the right to take possession of the "Morris" Bridge, for the purpose of maintaining it as a free bridge, on the expiration of the present charter, upon giving the owners three months' notice, and furnishing satisfactory security to the Supervisors of Westchester, West Farms, and Morrisania, that they will perpetually maintain the same as a free bridge; provided, that the Counties of New-York and Westchester do not agree to maintain the same as a free bridge, and provided further, that if the charter is extended to the assigns of MORRIS and COLE, they are to execute a writing, that certain persons shall have the right of free passage, and that all excess of toll received over and above the maintenance of the bridge, shall be expended in improving the roads in Westchester County, leading from the bridge and be subject to all the liabilities prescribed by the Revised Statutes.

The appeal from the General Term of the Marine Court, prescribed herein, shall be from an actual determination at such General Term only, and shall be taken within twenty days after judgment by such General Term.

If the fine is not paid, the person convicted shall be imprisoned, not to exceed sixty days.

NEW-YORK CITY RAILROADS.

Mr. GUNN offered the following resolutions:

Whereas, By permission of the people of the City of New-York, certain Railroads have been allowed to be built upon encumbering the streets of said City. And whereas, it is believed that certain of said Railroad Companies have overstepped the bounds intended to be given to said Companies by trespassing upon the rights of the citizens of said City. And whereas, it is believed that said roads were constructed at a comparatively small cost, and that certain of said Railroad Companies have issued an enormous and unreasonable amount of stock, and as is reported (and not contradicted) do continue to issue and sell such stock to the great injustice of the public, therefore

Resolved, That a Committee of three members of this House be appointed by the Speaker to examine into the financial and general affairs of said Companies, to ascertain the original cost of construction of said roads, the original and present proprietors of said roads, and the actual amount of stock, bonds and other evidences of debt sold by them to the public; that said Committee have power to send for persons, books and papers.

ASSESSMENTS IN NEW-YORK.

EMIGRANT SUPPORT.

THE JUDICIARY.

Mr. W. S. SMITH brought in a bill to amend the act in relation to the Judiciary.

The following clause is added to Section 31 of the act of Dec. 14, 1847, amending the act of May 19, 1847, which was amendatory of the act relative to the Judiciary:

"And whenever a cause or matter shall be pending in any Court of Sessions in any county in which the County Judge of such county shall have been Attorney or Counsel, it shall be his duty to make a certificate stating such fact and file the same in the office of the Clerk of such Court, and thereupon such cause or matter shall be vested in the Court of Oyer and Terminer, of said county in which such proceedings shall be had therein according to the practice of such Court as might have been had in such Court of Sessions if such cause or matter had remained therein.

RAILROAD AND OTHER CORPORATIONS.

Mr. FOWLER brought in a bill relative to Railroad and other Corporations. It provides that the 7th section of title 3d, chapter 18, of the first part of the Revised Statutes, shall not be construed to apply to any Act incorporating a Railroad or other Company, having in its own provisions the terms and time in which it shall be forfeited for non use, nor shall the time during which said Company is restrained by injunction be counted as part of the year mentioned there. Nor shall the year begin till the Company be in a position to commence operations.

COLLECTION OF TAXES.

Mr. JOHNSON desires to facilitate the collection of taxes, by enacting that when the Supervisor of any town shall neglect or refuse to approve of the Bond of the Collector of that town, it shall be lawful for the Board of Supervisors to approve the same and deliver the tax list and warrant to the Collector, and when any Collector shall neglect or refuse to give his bond as required by law, or to collect the taxes on the tax list, the Board of Supervisors may deliver the warrant and tax list to the Sheriff, who may collect the same, with the same fees and provisions as the Collector.

THE CITY TAX LIST.

The Select Committee of the Assembly, to whom was referred the City Tax Bill, has been busily engaged since its organization in sending for persons and papers to throw light upon the question of what are the City's necessities, and what are its wastes. They have had up all the heads of departments—closing their labors with the examination of the Comptroller, Mr. FLAGG. The upshot of all is that the Committee think that the City expenses may be reduced $700,000, and that $200,000 of this is to be taken from the amount set apart to the support of the almshouse. It seems to me that this item was the last that should have been curtailed by the Committee. I suppose the ten Governors can limit their expenditures to any sum that the City Treasury may give out, but is it wise thus arbitrarily to dictate what that amount shall be? I think not, and that if the sum total of our taxes must be reduced by so much, that the reduction might be made in some departments where the loss would be more easily borne, and where its withdrawal would not take from the suffering poor the aid that might keep from starvation the sick and the needy.

ONE WAY OR ANOTHER.

Yesterday forenoon the Assembly voted to repeal the law creating a Board of Railroad Commissioners. The reason assigned was that the State had no right, or that there was no necessity for exercising any supervision over the management and affairs of the various railroad corporations existent in the State. In a few hours after this vote was declared, the same Assembly raised a Committee to inquire into the manner in which the Consolidation Act of 1851 was carried out, and another to inquire in what manner a purchase and sale of the Troy and Schenectady Road was effected some years ago. This morning a resolution is introduced, raising a third Committee to inquire into the condition of the Railroads in the City of New-York. All these Committees are to have power to send for persons and papers. If it would not be considered an unwarrantable impertinence I might suggest that the information which the last Committee is raised to elicit can be found in full in the files of the members, and much more clearly given than it can be obtained by any Committee of the House, in the limited time which they can devote to the research. That this information should be under the eyes of the members during the entire session, and not be discovered may seem strange—nevertheless, it is so.

NORTHUP AT HOME.

It is said that a prophet is not without honor except in his own country. By the following notice of Mr. NORTHUP, which is extracted from a paper published at his home, it will be noticed that he forms no exception to the old saying. Speaking of his speech in favor of FILLMORE and DONELSON, the Greenville Press says:

"We supposed that a decent regard for the opinions of mankind would have saved Mr. N. from such political degradation as this. The last time we heard Mr. N. make a speech, was in reply to Mr. GIBBS at Argyle, in which he undertook to make himself out a better Anti-Slavery man and greater Abolitionist than Mr. G. But it seems that that face was merely one of dough assumed for the occasion, while now he unblushingly announces himself as bearing the real stamp of the genuine pully-face order."

They evidently know NORTHUP up there in Washington County. If GERRITT SMITH catches him again in the Capitol, he will be pretty well known here. Don't you think so? LEO.

Mr. Everett and Dr. Kane at Baltimore.

Hon. EDWARD EVERETT and Dr. E. K. KANE had a public reception at Baltimore on Thursday. In response to a complimentary address, Mr. EVERETT said:

"GENTLEMEN: The cordial greeting which you have extended to me is an honor which I fully appreciate, but language fails to express my obligation. I have always regarded the city of Baltimore as one of the most improving cities of our Union, and since my arrival I have marked with wonder the rapid strides which you have made. I look out upon monuments erected by you to the memory of those who fell in defence of our common country, and am gratified that the memory of those patriots are cherished by memorials so lasting. The merchants of Baltimore enjoy a wide reputation for their sterling integrity and energy, and they do credit to their city. The city of Baltimore has done much in the way of improvements, not the least of which is the chain of railroad which connects her with the great west, and which should be fostered for the bringing of that important trade to your own merchants. Gentlemen, again I thank you for your very kindly reception.

Dr. KANE said:

SIR—This unexpected honor takes me completely by surprise. It is with a painful sense of my own unworthiness, and only as the representative of my countrymen, that I venture to speak.

It was to the national sympathy of the citizens of Baltimore that the late Arctic Expedition largely owed its origin. To me, a citizen of Maryland who formerly commanded our little party, and in the midst of the high official duties of Secretary of the Navy, could not combine the interest of science and philanthropy.

I take a peculiar pride in sharing the hospitality of your city with the distinguished gentleman whose profound and fervid eulogium has so kindled within me the slumber of a long-cherished flame. Is it presuming too much in me to say that I have given my most unselfish and fervent aspirations to the name of WASHINGTON in planting its star upon the northernmost land at trodden on the American continent.

AID FOR KANSAS.

Meeting at the State Capitol.

GERRITT SMITH ON SLAVERY.

GERRITT SMITH ON NORTHUP.

Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times.

ALBANY, Friday, March 14, 1856.

The friends of Free Kansas had a glorious meeting last evening, in the Assembly Chamber. It was glorious in the numbers that were there—glorious in the character and position of those who had gathered—glorious in the enthusiastic response which it gave back to every sentiment uttered in favor of hostility to the increase of Slavery, and of a determination to stand firm in opposition to the encroachments of the Slave power—and most glorious in the noble contributions it invoked of that material aid which puts arms in the hands of the friends of Freedom, and nerves them to stand firm for the support of the right.

The meeting was organized by the appointment of Hon. Mintherne Tompkins, of Richmond, to be President, and the following Vice-Presidents and Secretaries:

Vice-Presidents.—Messrs. Barney, of New-York; Carpenter, of Dutchess; Masters, of Rensselaer; Clark, of St. Lawrence; Goodrich, of Oneida; Wright, of Cayuga; Cook, of Schuyler; and Wadsworth, of Erie.

Secretaries.—Messrs. Barnes, of Albany; Cole, of Orleans; and Snow, of Madison.

Messrs. Wright, of Cayuga; Rider, of Queens; Gage, of Yates; Gleason, of Fulton, and Wright, of Albany, were appointed a Committee to draft resolutions. While the Committee were out, Gen. SHANKLAND, of Kansas, was called out. He narrated, briefly but concisely, the difficulties which settlers from the free States had to encounter in their new homes—the annoyances to which they were subjected by the border ruffians from Missouri, and the efforts made by the Slavocracy to overawe and intimidate the free sentiments of the actual residents. Gen. S. having concluded, Mr. WRIGHT, from the Committee on Resolutions, reported the following:

Resolved, That the presiding officer of this meeting appoint a Committee of fifteen persons, who shall be residents of the city of Albany, to be called the NEW-YORK STATE KANSAS COMMITTEE.

Resolved, That this Committee shall, without delay, make an appeal to the people of the State of New-York for prompt liberal contributions of money for the relief of the people of Kansas.

Resolved, That said Committee shall appoint a Treasurer, and that the money which shall come into his hands shall be expended in such ways as they shall judge best for relieving the urgent personal wants and securing the threatened personal safety of that oppressed and outraged people.

Resolved, That it shall be the duty of said Committee to adopt such measures as they may deem proper to encourage emigration to Kansas, and to aid those who are disposed to settle in that Territory.

Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with the people of Kansas in the sufferings to which they have submitted, the hardships which they have endured, and the perils which they have encountered on account of the efforts which they have made for the preservation of Freedom; and that their bold and manly courage evinced under circumstances of great apparent danger, their prudent and discreet bearing under circumstances of great provocation, command our most cordial approbation, and our entire confidence and respect.

Resolved, That we hereby solemnly pledge ourselves to each other, and to the people of Kansas, that we will afford the latter all rightful and proper assistance for the preservation of liberty and the establishment of free institutions in that Territory; and we call upon the friends of Freedom and Justice throughout the State to aid in the accomplishment of these ends.

Resolved, That the highest obligation rest upon all the friends of Justice and Liberty to assist the people of Kansas in resisting, by all lawful means, the impious attempt of a foreign people to impose upon them the despotism of laws, which would be a disgrace to the most savage people; and we pledge ourselves to do all that true men and law-abiding and free citizens of right may do, to assist them in their contest with the insolent Slave power which has so long and so illy ruled this Republic.

Hon. GERRITT SMITH seconded these resolves in the most thrilling, impassioned sentences that I have ever heard uttered. He passed in review and held up to ridicule the doctrine of Squatter Sovereignty. He recited the history of the efforts made by the Missouri invaders to subjugate the Territory, and to force Slavery upon it. He denounced the Administration, and was especially severe upon MILLARD FILLMORE, for signing the Fugitive-Slave Law. He expressed the thought that the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, in view of what might result from it, may not be the worst of things. Slavery in grasping so much had lost its hold of what it already had. The institution of the Missouri line was a grant [illegible] to enter into a bargain with Slavery. They should have denied to Slavery all legal existence—denied not only that it had no right to do, but no right to be. It should have been proclaimed a most atrocious piracy, an unqualified and most naked outlaw. What if a farmer find a wolf in his sheep pen, will he enter into compromises with him by saying, "You take the half of the flock and leave me the other half?" No; he would deem the wolf a gentleman entirely incompetent to make a bargain—would insist that, as a wolf, he had but one right—and that, the right to be killed. That one right only has Slavery—the right to be killed. The gentleman concluded his eloquent denunciation of Slavery and those who uphold it, by declaring that there never was such an opportunity, as the present state of affairs in Kansas presents, of killing Slavery. Let us improve it. "Now is the day and now is the hour."

Mr. HAMMOND, of the Register, being recognized, was called upon. He said he had come here to listen and not to speak, nor would he now make a speech. But deeming this a meeting of the people and not of a party, he desired to utter his concurrence in the purposes of the meeting. [Applause.] He had had some experience in battling for Slavery. He had fought for it as long as he would fight for it. He had backed, and backed, and backed, until he was backed to the wall, and he now stood not to fight for, but to fight against Slavery. [Applause.] He had recently been in National Convention, and had tried to secure a triumph for Freedom. But he had been beaten and foiled. Now, he could not and would not fight for Slavery; [Applause;] but he could and he would fight for Freedom. [Applause.] He had but little money now; he never had had much, and, from past experience, he never expected to have a great deal. [Laughter.] But that little he was willing to share in a good cause. He believed the people of Kansas needed arms, and, poor as he was, he would give the price of a rifle to enable them to defend themselves in a contest for their rights. [Applause.]

Mr. NORTHUP spoke next in a strain of half denunciation of Slavery and half eulogy of MILLARD FILLMORE. When he had concluded, Hon. GERRITT SMITH arose and said:

Mr. Chairman, that speech must not go unanswered. [Applause.] I must "search out" the gentleman on the instant—[applause]—now, while he stands before me, with his strange and wicked logic still fresh in the minds of those who heard him. [Applause.] Mr. NORTHUP declared himself an Abolitionist.

Mr. NORTHUP—I beg the gentleman's pardon. I made no such declaration.

Mr. SMITH—Nevertheless, you made the avowal, as I shall show before I have done with you. [Applause.] He said he was opposed to the abolition of Slavery, until the slaves should have learned to read. This was an absurdity. The slave code says no slave shall be taught to read—not even the holy Bible. If a man is not to be allowed to come out from Slavery until he shall have learned to read and to enjoy Freedom, then he will never come out of Slavery at all. But Mr. NORTHUP, by admitting that slaves should be taught to read, avows himself an Abolitionist, by eliminating for the slave a right which Slavery denies to all its victims. To admit that slaves have any rights, is to demand that Slavery shall cease—[applause]—because, while slaves, all rights are denied to them.

Mr. NORTHUP said he would vote for MILLARD FILLMORE, and, at the same moment demand the repeal of the Fugitive Slave Law, of which MILLARD FILLMORE is the author! MILLARD FILLMORE is for dragging back the fugitive into the hell of Slavery, while Mr. NORTHUP says he will bid the fugitive God-speed! Monstrous inconsistency! Alas, for the kindness which such a vote would extend to the oppressed slave? [Applause.] An indorsement of the Fugitive Slave Law, write author, is an indorsement of that which is more cruel than murder. For would not Mr. NORTHUP rather see his child fall beneath the dagger of the assassin than to see her dragged into Slavery?

Mr. NORTHUP, do you believe the mother has a right to her child? Answer, if you please, for I have promised to sift you and search you out. [Applause.] Do you, Mr. NORTHUP, believe that the mother has a right to her child?

Mr. NORTHUP: I do.

Mr. SMITH—Then you are an Abolitionist! [Applause;] for the moment you admit that a slave has any right—even the slave mother the right to her own child—then are you an Abolitionist; for this right—given of God as a right to be inviolate and an inalienable one—is its right to be inviolate and an inalienable one—is its right to be denied by Slavery. Under that accursed institution, not even the mother has the right to her helpless infant. It is the property of her master. And yet you, Mr. NORTHUP, admitting this right, say you are an Abolitionist. But, sir, you are an Abolitionist, when you admit this right. [Applause.] Hence you are not as bad a man as you believe yourself to be. [Laughter and Applause.]

Mr. NORTHUP, do you believe in the right of the slave to the rite of matrimony?

Mr. NORTHUP—Yes.

Mr. SMITH—Then, sir, you are an Abolitionist. [Applause.] For Slavery denies that right. The master claims the wife as his property, and denies to the husband the authority which the word of God confers upon him over his wife. If the master says to the wife, "go there," she must go, whatever protest may be interposed by the husband. You deny that this is right; and in making this denial, you avow yourself an Abolitionist, and you are one, though you may not know it. [Applause.] For the moment any man admits that slaves have rights which Slavery denies to its victims, that moment he becomes an Abolitionist; for the moment one of these rights is conferred upon a slave, that moment he becomes free; because he could not, at the same moment, enjoy that right and remain a slave. [Applause.]

Any man who believes that slaves have a right to be taught to read, is an Abolitionist.

Any man who believes that a mother has a right to her child, is an Abolitionist.

Any man who believes in the sacred rite of matrimony is an Abolitionist.

He may not know it—as in the case of my friend NORTHUP—[laughter] but he is none the less an Abolitionist;—an Abolitionist not merely, but an immediate Abolitionist. [Applause.]

Many sincere men and women scout the idea that they are Abolitionists, who are Abolitionists in heart and soul and utterance. There is not even a Slaveholder in the South who is not an Abolitionist, and the more a man knows of Slavery the more intensely is he an Abolitionist. Let a band of pirates break into Mr. NORTHUP'S chamber this night, and inform him that they have come to carry him into Slavery. His knit brow, his pallid cheek, his trembling limbs and his clenched fists would proclaim him an Abolitionist, as he resolved to be free or die. [Immense applause.]

But, Mr. Chairman, in this case, Mr. NORTHUP might only be an Abolitionist in regard to himself. [Laughter.] That, he regretted to say, was the case with too many. They would never, themselves, submit to Slavery; but they can look on and see others enslaved.

Mr. SMITH referred, (Mr. NORTHUP having retired,) in closing, to the pernicious influence exerted upon Freedom by the spurious and false interpretations put upon the word of God by Slavery-defending Divines. They had not the spirit of the Master; for the spirit of Christ was not in sympathy with Slavery; and he who had most of the spirit of Christ—he who most perfectly loved his neighbor as himself—was the most perfect Abolitionist.

This is but a meagre sketch of this most masterly philippic. It exerted, in the progress of its delivery, mingled admiration for its author and pity for its excoriated victim, whose remarks had elicited it.

Hon. A. B. DICKINSON, of Steuben, was recognized and called out. He responded in a few eloquent remarks, to enforce his position that the pending controversy was not whether negroes should be slaves, but whether free white men and women should be the Slaves of Slavery. His remarks were directly to the point, and were received with enthusiasm.

EDWARD C. DELAVAN spoke briefly, a more prelude to presenting his check for $1,000 to aid in procuring arms and to assist emigrants in reaching Kansas.

GERRITT SMITH gave $2,000 for a like purpose, and the following smaller sums were announced:

Albany Evening Journal	$100
Albany State Register	100
Thomas W. Griffin & Co.	25
Thomas S. Walker	25
L. Chapin	25
S. Whipple	25
Andrew Clark	25

And other less amounts. The entire subscription exceeded four thousand nine hundred and forty dollars! Is not this an evidence that there was some earnestness of manner in those who held counsel last evening? I think it does, and I believe it is but the beginning of the bonfire that ere it dies out is to destroy every vestige of the Slave power.

I understand that at a meeting to be held at Peterboro' next week, GERRITT SMITH will report the proceedings of that evening, and give another thousand dollars to aid emigrants from that vicinity in reaching Kansas. LEO.

Aid for Kansas—Large Meeting in Milwaukee, Wis.—$2,000 Subscribed.

At a very largely attended meeting, held in Milwaukee on the 6th inst, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, We believe the history of the past, the blessings we now enjoy, and the prospects of the future, alike attest that freedom is national, and as an element in government must become universal, while Slavery in any form is sectional, and can only exist so long as ignorance and chains shall bind the enslaved; And, whereas, the Missouri Compromise of 1820, held for more than thirty years to be a sacred barrier against the encroachments of Slavery into the Great Western Territories north of 36 and 30', and which forever consecrated to Freedom the Territory of Kansas, has been repealed against the will of the people; And, whereas, the Territory of Kansas has been invaded at different points, by bands of men from a neighboring State, with no other purpose than to interfere with, and control the elections, and thereby force Slavery into the same; And, whereas, the present Administration has failed to enforce its avowed principles of popular sovereignty, as avowed in the Nebraska bill, in protecting the citizens of Kansas in the exercise of their political rights. Therefore resolved;

1. That we sympathize with the citizens of Kansas in their struggle for freedom and in their efforts to make Kansas a Free State.

2. That the central position of Kansas should secure to her the blessings of liberty, and that we believe it to be our duty, as also that of the General Government and all other citizens, to use every effort consistent with the constitution to make Kansas a Free State.

3. That we, who can, will immediately become citizens of Kansas, and those of us who cannot leave our homes will aid the young men of our City and State to emigrate to that Territory.

4. That all parts of the State be invited to unite in the movement, to call township meetings without delay, to organize auxiliary societies; and where action cannot be had before, to press these objects on the attention of the people on town meeting day.

5. That this meeting do now proceed to organize a Kansas Emigration Aid Association for the State of Wisconsin, by the appointment of an Executive Board, consisting of twenty-one members, five of whom shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, until the board shall have perfected its organization and established its bylaws, as follows:—E. CENTRAL AMERICA.

News from New-Granada.

THE POLITICAL TROUBLES IN MEDELLIN—BUSINESS AT THE ISTHMUS—PANAMA AS A WRECKING STATION—STEAM COMMUNICATION WITH CENTRAL AMERICA—CONGRATULATORY ITEMS.

The Aspinwall Courier, in its summary of news for the last fortnight, ending 4th of March, says:

The health of the isthmus continues to about the same as when our last mail left for the United States—good. Political matters and local business are in a general quiet condition—Aspinwall City has sold its young new Government, which condition of affairs everybody takes very coolly, especially since the arrival of the bark Lorne, Capt. SHALLEY, with the new Government, the materials of which is already on the ground, and we and most those of the Aspinwall and Panama Ice Company, where Mr. W. F. Thomas sold it out to customers for cash, daily (single displays) at the average of eight cents per pound.

Two to three Yankee mailers, a few white-sailed Jamaica schooners, are expected in the bay of February.

The New-Granada Canal Company's Agents at Bocas del Toro are pushing on their work, the river and clearing and improvements do not pull their money.

The political difficulties in the department of Antioquia, on the State of Panama, are not yet adjusted. Some parties who have been engaged in former revolutions are now in the Republic are returning to their homes, and from the wilderness of rumor, we should be led to anticipate another outbreak soon.

The Iron Horse of the W. I. P. M. S. Co., the wharf of the U. S. M. S. Co., and the Depot of the P. R. R. Co., progresses slowly, but on fast as circumstances of time and locality will permit.

The Aspinwall market is dull, expectation but little change in prices. There is always some purchases in hand, yet we have nothing to report. Those who have money to invest in this place, and who are interested with diminished prospects, can do so with impunity. Vegetables are scarce at present, and fruit is very far off.

It is rumored that the U. S. General will soon leave the Isthmus for duty in the United States.

The Panama Railroad Company's Agents are at work on the Isthmus, in the department of Chiriqui, for the purpose of the Government of New-Granada.

[illegible] Saturday, a bill [illegible] in relation to mines, giving [illegible] of eighteen years power to [illegible] to be business, the same as [illegible] with the consent of [illegible] guardians. In the Assembly, a resolution was made in favor of abolishing pawnbrokers in this City. A motion to reconsider the vote repealing the Railroad Commission act was lost. At the afternoon session, the death of Hon. William Parmelee, Mayor of Albany, was announced, and the Assembly adjourned, as a mark of respect for his memory.

[illegible] We publish in another column the particulars of a terrible disaster which occurred on Monday evening on the Delaware River at Philadelphia. The ferry-boat New-Jersey, while plying between that city and Camden, took fire in the middle of the stream. There being a great deal of [illegible] much difficulty was experienced in [illegible] her, but she was finally [illegible] A great number of passengers [illegible] jumped [illegible] and were rescued by small boats, and others [illegible] themselves on floating ice. It is feared that about 20 lives are lost. The boat was burned to the water's edge.

[illegible] The mail steamship George Law, with one million two hundred and nineteen thousand dollars in freight from California, arrived at this port on Saturday morning. Though the news by her was published in the morning's papers, and is dated at sufficient interesting, it is without any feature of marked importance. The summary of later intelligence is given from Nicaragua, various Central and South American ports, and the Sandwich Islands.

[illegible] The U. S. Mail steamship Hermann arrived at this port on Monday morning from Bremen on the 3rd, and Southampton on the 5th inst. Her passengers have not so late by three days as those brought by the Arabia.

The Nicaragua Bubble.

[illegible] we publish in another column a letter from Mr. Wm. Walker, that the Nicaragua Transit Company of California assessment, viz. for the [illegible] of the expenses of the expedition of General Walker "in [illegible] or taking by force the property of American citizens." The managing agent states that he deems it a duty to the public, to the creditors of the Transit Company, to remain quiet by letting the ships of the Company lay at the wharves, until our Government has time to examine into and look into this outrage committed upon their property. He adds that as he does not consider passengers or the property of American citizens safe on the transit of the Isthmus, he cannot be instrumental in inducing either to take the passage.

The history of the Nicaragua Transit Company has been a remarkable one—bold and singular in its initiation, eventful in its progress, and violent in its sequel. It is, in brief, a modern Mississippi scheme with a well-known lawyer by the name of WELLER as the John Law of the speculation. WELLER was originally associated in the affair with Mr. CORNELIUS VANDERBILT, who had a purpose of his own beyond Stock jobbing—though this he has never lost sight of as the main chance—to accomplish. They went out together to Europe in 1852-53 to negotiate the Canal grant, which WELLER had secured from the Mosquito or Nicaragua Government, and some favor was found in London for the opposite project of a Ship Canal, under auspices of the joint protection of the two Governments, which WELLER had brought about in the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty—but on one side of the Accessory Transit grant, until after their return to the United States, when, in the Spring of 1852, the idea occurred of putting the Canal and Transit Stock separately upon the New-York market. Meanwhile, Mr. VANDERBILT had established his line of California steamers on this new Central American route, giving to the Accessory Transit Company, as a basis of profit on their stock, the transit tolls up the San Juan and over the Isthmus and Lake of Nicaragua, from ocean to ocean. The stock of the concern was created in this wise: The Canal grant was divided among the parentees into 192 grand shares or "rights." To each was assigned 200 separate Accessory Transit shares, making the entire 38,400 shares of the nominal par of $100 each. Capital there was none, not even the paper value of the Canal rights as they were created and sold separately in the market. This was probably an outlay, between the projects of about $200,000 in engineering the grants from the semi-savage rulers and "diplomatic" of the country; in defraying the expenses of the commission to London, and in getting on a fleet "bungoes" or river boats, tackle, furniture and baggage accoutrements on the Nicaragua route. The whole, if assessed on the Canal rights at their cost, would have amounted to but one dollar per share. The first sales of the stock, made in March, 1852, were at par, [illegible] and $800 for the Canal rights [illegible] the same month [illegible] down, the latter [illegible] in the [illegible] and the Canal rights [illegible] separately, [illegible] the stock, [illegible] grand total, of [illegible]

From this commencement [illegible] went rapidly down—quite as far as the [illegible] there were no [illegible] to sell on per [illegible] from the Fall to Winter of 1853, when another happy thought occurred to Mr. VAN WINKLE and his fellow-actors of remarkable notoriety. This was quite other than to buy out the VANDERBILT boats, which, on the first year's experiment, had been found to pay the owner over seven hundred thousand dollars clear profit. He would sell them "a great sacrifice" to the Transit Company, and take most of the pay in four millions of their stock, at seventy per cent. discount! In other words, 40,000 new shares at the valuation of $30 the share, and $150,000 of the short bonds of the Company. The bargain was struck; the property transferred; and VANDERBILT, after steaming the stock to 63 or 65, and selling out, and after a few months' additional service as managing agent at New-York, retired to fortune and a steam yacht. None but his like could supply his place, and such a man was found in Mr. CHARLES MORGAN, who assumed the New-York agency of the steamships, though greatly, it was said, to VANDERBILT's displeasure, who suddenly discovered that the Transit Company owed him largely for coal supplies, back commissions, reclamations, &c.; that they were, or would be, outstripped generally, and that the whole concern was only fit for a shuttle cock on the Stock Exchange, with which he commenced incontinently to play, by selling the shares short at seventy-five per cent. discount, or $25 the share.

There was a subsequent discovery made by Mr. VANDERBILT's son-in-law in regard to the speculation, the value of which development he esteemed so highly as to go in the market and make himself the nominal owner of a few hundred shares, to legally qualify him as relator or prosecutor in the Supreme Court! This occurred only a year ago, and the nature of the pleadings, reported at the time, is such as to illustrate the value which the family set upon the charter of the Company before the coup d'état of General WALKER. The cardinal plea was the total irregularity and invalidity of the business of the Accessory Transit Company—in the steamship line particularly. They had no authority to buy VANDERBILT's boats, and less right to use them when they had bought and doubled their stock to pay for them! The other allegations had reference to the excessive commissions paid to MORGAN, at New-York, and GARRISON, at San Francisco, and although the Court denied the injunction prayed for, which was to "burst up" the concern while in MORGAN's hands, by a process not unlike the decree of WALKER, since visited upon VANDERBILT, the opposition to the management was unrelenting until MORGAN was finally and recently superseded; and justly so, as far as the outrageous commissions paid to GARRISON and himself were the cause of grievance.

This change of rule, by the restoration of the Old Bourbons to the pickings and profits afforded by the concern, though advised by another powerful steamship clique, whose rivalry against MORGAN had been equally unfortunate for their own stockholders and disastrous to the Nicaragua Company, came at a most inopportune moment for VANDERBILT, being cotemporary with the fillibustering achievement of WALKER in Nicaragua, which had been closely watched by GARRISON and MORGAN, and turned to their personal advantage, in contemplation of what might occur under the double revolution in New-York and Nicaragua. GARRISON duly advised his co-agent and partner of the movements on the Pacific side, and it was said at the time that he gave him practical proof of what they were to expect from WALKER, in the event of his complete success, and at what cost, by inclosing a check in blank, limited to twenty thousand dollars, to make good any box or boxes of treasure that might be abstracted on the Isthmus on a certain trip of the Nicaragua boats! Rumor has it that the noted Colonel PARKER H. FRENCH came down the Pacific to San Juan del Sud on the same steamer with that check; that he stopped at Virgin Bay to join his friend WALKER; that one or more boxes of gold were quietly left in the same vicinity; and that the shipment to the Company here was about $14,000 short, until Mr. GARRISON's check was produced to make it "all right!"

It was now MORGAN's turn to play the Bear on the Stock Exchange, and to contract heavily to deliver the Accessory Transit shares ahead on the prospect of a revocation of the grant or a decree in his own favor for a new Company. He knew the real weak place in the charter, which was that the Canal had never been earnestly undertaken, nor the tax of $10,000 a year and the transit toll of 10 per cent. paid to the Government. He relied upon this, no doubt, and the false position in which VANDERBILT, by his coöperation with the Panama route and his relations to the Government at Washington, had placed the Company toward the Walker rule in Nicaragua, to effect his object. The first mistake of the speculators in the bubble, who, under the prestige of VANDERBILT's name had run the shares up from 18 to 25, was, in supposing that the Company, and not MORGAN and GARRISON, had made themselves all right with WALKER. The second was in believing that VANDERBILT would sacrifice everything else to carry up the Transit scheme; forgetting that he has other and more strictly private views upon our own Government. He would like no doubt to have a fat mail contract for the Transit route to California, but would like much more to have a mail contract for the VANDERBILT steamers to Europe. He seeks the overthrow of the COLLINS contract, as he sought it once before, but in order to compass this end or any other by favor of the Administration, it was necessary to play fast and loose with the Young Fillibuster in Nicaragua. Of his every movement WALKER has no doubt been duly advised, and being already out of temper with Secretary MARCY—and played upon, perhaps, by the parties seeking, as a stock speculation, the ruin or temporary consternation of the Transit Company, and the quietus or the same end, the decree of a new grant—he seems to have jumped to the conclusion that it would be best, by a startling proclamation, to clear "the speculators and politicians of the United States" that he is not to be trifled with, and that a few acts of this daring nature are necessary to teach us that he is able to take the advance of even our great progress in statesmanship and civilization!

The moral of all this is that while New-York with her rival and mammoth jobbers and contractors in steam-lines, transit and mail routes and the harvest of commissions and perquisites which flow from their management—profitable to all except the stockholders—is a very great place from which to originate gigantic schemes of speculation, we should take due care to observe the integrity of Foreign Charters, if we would have our own Government protect our property in Foreign States, and exercise a reasonable degree of individual caution in trusting everything to the good faith of great managers, who to-day may be with their stockholders, and to-morrow, certainly against them. As between the two gentlemen who have figured most prominently in this Nicaragua bubble, it would probably be difficult, as we are quite sure it would be unprofitable, for mere outsiders to attempt to choose. There is, however, some little interest felt to know where the John Law of the scheme is ultimately to land. Most likely, with feline adroitness, upon his feet, though, as my Lord Duberly would say, "mayhap his fate lies in another direction!"

Missing Ships.

That is a painful mystery which enshrouds the ship that sails from port and never returns. Curiosity and anxiety prey upon our feelings as we wait long for her coming, and then ponder over the probabilities of her fate. Days wear into weeks; and Hope ventures forth at morning, stretching her eager eye over the sea to catch the returning signal; but Despair comes home at night bringing no intelligence from the missing ship. Weeks wear into months; and imagination begins to picture the horrors of storms and famines, and icebergs and flames. We resist the painful convictions, and restlessly wait for the dark mystery to be solved. Months wear away; and as our anxiety is still unsatisfied, we speculate upon chances. We interrogate every mariner that comes in from sea; we scrutinize every wreck that drifts on the currents of the ocean; we look into distant and obscure ports; we follow the devious tracks of ships from the frozen zone to the tropics, in search of the object of our solicitude. At last the months wear into years; but sleepless Hope will not yet give up the chase. Affection leads it forth, from time to time, to weigh improbable chances and to trust in impossible events. Then, years wear away, but

"The ship is still missing! Her mariners sleep,
Put down in the depths of the fathomless deep;
And no tidings shall tell if their death-grapple came,
By disease or by famine—by flood or by flame."

Such experiences as these have been familiar to some of our readers. They are becoming more general every year with the growth of our spreading commerce and the increasing number of our ships. As the vessels that we successively launch multiply the ties, so they multiply the sorrows that connect us with the sea; for year after year, some of them are added to that mysterious fleet that sails from port and never is heard from more. This fleet is larger than most of us imagine. It is not composed alone of the proud steamers and favorite packet-ships that have disappeared in the sea, as it were, before our eyes. Humble cod-fishermen and coasters, Cape Horn whalemen, East Indiamen, foreign, traders and Arctic explorers are in it. We can only realize their number when we reflect upon the adventurous character, and the far-reaching enterprise of our marine commerce. On the rugged sea-coasts of New-England, which furnishes the bone and sinew of American seamen, are villages of orphans and widows, waiting and watching for a return from this fleet. In some of these the watch-fires have burnt for years, and will be extinguished only by the death of the watchers!

Now, it is painful to think of these things. As they pass through our minds we cannot help inquiring, Are the dangers of the sea more omnipotent than when the sails of our commerce first tempted them? or are our ships less strongly fitted for service than they were in those days when all our packet business with Europe was successfully transacted by crafts of a hundred tons burden? Are our ships constructed as much for endurance as they are for speed or for stowage? Are their models as safe as they are elegant? Are our shipmasters as accomplished, in the practical duties of their profession, as were those who sailed in the generation before them? If we could answer these questions, we might be able to throw some light upon the mystery of missing ships.

It must be acknowledged that, like many other things under the influence of our progressive age, ships and seamen have degenerated. The sterling qualities, that belonged to them in former days, are now rare with us, who build for show and sail for reputation. As our commerce makes us more familiar with the ocean, we entertain less fear of its power and dangers, and so become habitually more reckless in meeting them. The consequence is, that disasters multiply, and ships are lost or missing, because all those who are interested have not been competent or faithful to discharge their duty. This duty belongs alike to the ship-builder and to the sailor, to the owner and to the master. When they discharge it faithfully, there is as much safety in navigating the sea as in traveling the land. It is when one of all of these are careless or incompetent, that a sea voyage becomes dangerous and results in dreadful disaster. The carpenter left an auger-hole unplugged, and the caulker a seam unsealed, and the ship sailed and never reached her destination. The owner over-loaded her, or cleared her when she was unseaworthy, and she never returned to port. The master obtained his command, not because he was a practical seaman and an accomplished navigator, but because he had the influences of family or wealth to purchase the station; and he went to sea and never was heard from!

There are now nearly one hundred sail of coasting and foreign vessels overdue at the port of New-York. Many of them have doubtless been destroyed on their voyage by unusual storms of weather, and with country, in their days or late disasters. But it is more than probable that there are some of these vessels of which we shall never hear again.

On the 23d of January last, the United States mail steamship Pacific, Captain ASA ELDRIDGE, sailed from Liverpool for this port, with forty-five passengers and a ship's company of one hundred and forty-one—officers and men. She has not yet arrived. Where is she? Our hopes and fears alternate as we strive to solve this mystery.

The British steamship Persia sailed from Liverpool three days after the Pacific, and, after fourteen days, arrived here in a crippled condition, reporting an uncommonly severe passage. The same report has been brought in by the United States steamship Arago, from Havre, and by other packets that sailed from Europe in January and February. Storms and icebergs have obstructed the Atlantic as never before, and it is not possible that the Pacific has altogether escaped their power. The ship was in good trim and the machinery in good order when she sailed. But her commander and her engineer were new men in their stations. With a new rival steamer close at his heels, Captain ELDRIDGE must have felt a proper ambition to sustain the character of the ship he had assumed, and would naturally be tempted to try her best qualities, in the headlong race that has been running for years over the highway of the ocean. He knew that he would be expected to make a good passage. He knew that the Pacific and the Persia would be watched from both shores of the Atlantic; and he must have felt that the reputation of his ship, and of the American line, was put at stake in the voyage.

But days have worn into weeks, and weeks are wearing into months, and the Pacific has not arrived! In her swift race, did she strike and founder on the icy barriers that stretched across her course? She was provided with "water-tight compartments." So was the City of Glasgow, which sailed on the same voyage long ago, and has never arrived. The Arago only escaped destruction by almost a miracle.

The Last Great Fraud in England.

The adjourned inquest on Mr. SADLEIR, of whose gigantic defalcation we recently recorded the story, and the developments of the case as by the last steamer unfolded, serve as an additional evidence, if any such were required, of the little reliance which is to be placed on the statements of the London Morning Advertiser, either on personal, political or commercial matters. The story, as told by that journal and copied by some of our cotemporaries here, was painted with a pen of most unbounded sweep and exaggeration of color. With respect to the forgeries of title deeds under the Incumbered Estates Courts, said to be of such magnitude and executed with such diabolic exactitude, it has been discovered, after the most minute inquiries, that only two such cases have occurred, and in these the attempt is described to have been such as could not, if submitted to investigation, have escaped detection for an hour. The losses on this head do not appear likely to be large.

With respect to the 250,000 shares of the Royal Swedish Railway, stated to have been forged, it appears that though issued without authority, they all were perfect instruments and bore in every instance, genuine signatures. Mr. SADLEIR having obtained possession of a large unissued quantity for the purpose of completing them with his signature, seems to have got rid of them in any way in which he could raise funds upon their security; and though the number may probably reach that stated, the amounts advanced will not be found to be more than one-fourth of their issued price. Indeed the SADLEIR case in this particular of fraud, appears exactly analogous to that of ROBERT SCHUYLER, which is stated to be the precedent on which he built up this huge edifice of crime, and the English journals compare with much self-satisfaction, the readiness already evinced by the shareholders to assume the responsibility of these shares, issued through their over-confidence or neglect, with the refusal of parties in this country to assume a similar responsibility. They neglect, however, to state that our Courts of law have decided that the shareholders are liable, and that known decision may naturally operate in inducing the English determination. In every country the ruling feeling of self-interest in all such instances prevails. No parties will be found in our country seriously to assume a responsibility, contracted without their knowledge in fraud.

The chief loss in this, as in all such cases, appears, unfortunately to think, likely to fall on those least able to sustain it. "The Tipperary Joint Stock Bank," an Irish institution founded by Mr. SADLEIR's family, in which the savings of many of the farming and trading classes in the south of Ireland were deposited, has suspended payment, and the losses which its failure has occasioned, is but too likely to bring want and suffering to many an humble hearth.

Some of the Irish journals which were politically or personally opposed to this unfortunate gentleman, absolutely rot over his grave with a boisterous delight, and horrible exultation, but the good and the gentle, instead of cheering or chuckling, or indulging in idle vengeance over such a fall, will reflect rather on the lesson it teaches, and endeavor to guard against permitting to weak, frail men such opportunity for crime as seduced Mr. SADLEIR onwards to so fearful an end. The compensation Mr. SADLEIR offered was small. Life to him covered as he was with such terrors, must have been a burden, and to part with it a relief.

But who can record or write the agony which such a mind must have suffered with the dark shadow hanging over it of detection, and the endless exile which discovery would bring. Mr. SADLEIR was a bold and reckless speculator and endeavored, instead of honestly toiling up to the golden apple, to grasp it in a bound. Let every man who is captivated by the golden fruit of sudden wealth into daring speculations, or wild, perhaps, has already entered on such a career, read the stories of SADLEIR and of SCHUYLER, and pause before he plunges or rides on further.

Under the genial influence of Spring weather, business is improving at all our places of amusement. Managers will now reap some substantial return for their enterprise—and it is time, too. The severity of the Winter, the impassibility of the streets, and the disinclination of sensible people to take cold by way of amusement, have militated seriously against the growth of Theatrical treasuries. If the books of the various managements could be inspected, there would be a sad uniformity in the entries on the wrong side. Things would have been much worse, if there had been any unusual or expensive enterprises. But fortunately for themselves, the managers were not carried away by Artgeneralings. Novelty has not been the rage. Indeed, it would puzzle the oldest inhabitant to remember a season so dull and stupid as the past one. In the way of originality, nothing whatever has been effected; not a single American play of consequence has been produced, and as for revivals they have been of the cheapest kind, and remarkable for their dullness. In view of these facts, it is almost to be regretted that some of our City potentates have not failed, and made way for bolder and better men. There is an opening yet for a theatre in New-York that will devote some attention to native drama. We have plenty of dramatists to supply such an establishment with a constant succession of novelties, and the exclusive privilege of representation, would make the speculation profitable. The European market, although by no means exhausted, has been largely overdrawn. If a good play is imported, all our managers have a scramble for its possession, and, to speedily profit by the theft, hurries it on the stage without proper care and expenditure.

The Spring campaign opens with indications of better spirit. Several novelties will be produced during the week at the various theatres; and among the number an original play written for Mr. J. M. MCVICKER, the Yankee Comedian, by "a gentleman of this City." This will be played at Burton's Theatre (to which establishment Mr. MCVICKER has returned after a highly successful provincial engagement) on Wednesday next. It is described as a Comedy and bears the title of "Taking the Chances."

At Burton's Theatre to-night, three excellent comic pieces will be performed, "Fortunio," "That Blessed Baby," and "Urgent Private Affairs," Mr. BURTON appears in the two last pieces.

At LAURA KEENE's VARIETIES the melo-drama of "Camille," (already known to our readers,) is to be produced, with Mr. JOHNSON and Miss KEENE in the principal characters. Pieces of this cast are exciting for a time, but with their novelty their merit disappears. Whether this revival will create a sensation remains to be seen. For the sake of better works we hope it will not. We are certain, however, that Miss KEENE's impersonation of the heroine will be dramatically interesting, and for that reason we recommend our readers to see the play.

At WALLACK'S THEATRE there will be a round of sterling old comedy during the week with the promise, (if it is exciting to any one,) of Mr. WALLACK's appearance towards its close. To-night SHERIDAN's comedy of the "Rivals" will be performed with a most powerful and admirable cast. Entertainment concludes with the farce "To Oblige Benson."

At NIBLO'S THEATRE the Revels are still in the ascendency. Their ballet entertainment is the best afforded in the City, although by no means remarkable.

At the BROADWAY THEATRE the horse drama continues to draw well. Two grand spectacular pieces will be given to-night—"Tuscar, the Tartar," and the "Cataract of the Ganges."

At the MUSEUM will be produced the grand oriental spectacle of "Aladdin, or the Wonderful Lamp." Over a hundred performers will assist in the rendering of the piece, dressed in genuine costumes. The manager says that real Chinese dresses, real Chinese banners, and Chinese nature, performers (separate expressly for this piece).

At BUCKLEY'S (the only place where you can hear good negro minstrelsy free from vulgarity) the 100th consecutive night of the "Court of Seelong" will be given during the week, with an Ethiopian entertainment. BUCKLEYS are about removing to a new Hall, opposite the Metropolitan Hotel—built expressly for their increasing business.

The Opera.

The Academy of Music gave a performance on Saturday evening, but in consequence of another "indisposition" the opera had to be changed from "Norma" to "Lucrezia Borgia." Miss HERSEE was to have sung in the first opera, but like Miss PHILLIPS she was indisposed. These American prima donnas seem to be more affected by the weather than foreign artists. What a treasure is La GRANGE! It would be a perfect compliment to our climate if she would only condescend to be sick for once. It is of no matter how hard she works, or how severe the weather may be, she is always ready. The more we see of this admirable artiste, the more we are convinced that her place will with difficulty be filled when she makes her departure. Saturday has never been a good night for opera, and this social circumstance added to the disappointment occasioned by Miss HERSEE's illness, caused the house to have a meagre and hungry look. The opera was got through as well as could be expected. M'GUIRE, who was the Orsini, received an encore in the drinking song. Shortly the "Traviata" will be performed for the last time. The Academy will be closed for the remainder of the week, to afford ample opportunities for the rehearsal of ALBONI's new opera. This looks like enterprise. It is an indication of an improved spirit when a manager is bold enough to have his operas made on the spot. There are three or four men in our midst who are equal to the task of supplying the public with good music. Let them have an opportunity.

FROM WASHINGTON.

Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, March 11, 1858.

THE KANSAS CONSTITUTION MESSAGE.

Congress has transacted no public business to-day, except the speeches in the House on the propositions to authorize the Committee on Elections to send for persons and papers in the Reader Election case. Mr. PENNINGTON, of Pennsylvania, as well as Mr. TOMB, of the same State, sustained the power of the House to make this investigation, and to go to the very foundation of the proceedings, by virtue or in consequence of which the respective claimants assert that they have been elected. The former of these gentlemen especially urged this doctrine, and to sustain it cited from a speech made in the Georgia case by Mr. DAGNCOURT, of Virginia—in his time one of the brazen lights of the Virginia Democracy—who held that in the examination of the qualifications of its own members, the House had a right to break through every State restriction or barrier, and go even direct to the ballot box, if necessary, and count the ballots. He also referred with effect to the recent action of the Senate of the United States in the case of Mr. TRUMBULL, where that body asserted its right to go behind the Constitution,—the organic law of the State of Illinois, and did give that gentleman his seat in direct defiance of said Constitution, in the view of many gentlemen. I think the question of the legal and constitutional right of the House to go into the investigation asked is abundantly established; and being so, I ask how any honest man can refuse the investigation into specific charges of wrong and outrage which, if true, establish the fact that Arbitrary principle of a free Government has been disregarded for the supremacy of a reign of terrorism and usurpation unequaled in the annals of this Continent.

WHO PAY THE MILEAGE?

Among the questions to come before the House for consideration at an early day, is a resolution from the Committee on Elections, to pay the usual mileage and per diem to FOULKE, as successful claimant of the seat as Representative from the Eighth Congressional District of Ill. It seems to me that the proposition has assumed the shadow of a claim to impartial consideration. Foulke was the Democratic opponent of Mr. TRUMBULL for the great prize in question before the people. Mr. T. was defeated, but was subsequently chosen to the United States Senate. Meanwhile the Governor of Illinois [illegible]

WOLFSDEN!
AN AUTHENTIC ACCOUNT OF THINGS THERE AND THEREUNTO PERTAINING, AS THEY ARE AND HAVE BEEN.
"Clover clubs and honeysuckles
Are hard in six a way as this is."
For the vividness and fidelity of this picture of rustic New-England life, the Portland Advertiser remarks after this manner:
"We know the men and mothers, the boys, girls and dogs described. Have we not been to the same village schools and temperance lectures? Have we not gone to the same meeting house, and taken our dinner with us? Have we not seen the thriftless family of the drunken blacksmith, and met the thrifty Squire Chimbs over at the Chimby neighborhood? Have we not seen—yes, and been a party of—the good hearty times on Thanksgiving evenings, where the blessed Margarets and Helens, and Amys, made 'a little heaven below' quite satisfactory to the awkward youth?"
In one volume 12mo. Illustrated. Price $1 25.

The Late Disturbance in Yale College.

NEW-HAVEN, Friday, March 14, 1856.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

The excitement arising out of the late disturbance in College, has not subsided yet. The investigation of the affair was handed over to the civil authorities, and thus far has been prosecuted with more perseverance than success. So reluctant are the students to divulge anything which may in any way implicate their fellows, that though a large number have been examined by the Court of Inquiry no testimony of importance has been elicited. Considerable excitement has been afforded by the attempts of student persons to avoid being summoned to give their testimony, and the following lines are supposed to express the feeling of the one whom the officer is endeavoring to subpœna:

"Twinkle, twinkle, little star,
How you wonder where I are."

Justice Bonnell, to day, tried one of the students held to answer to the charge of being engaged in breaking the windows in the room of the tutor, and bound him over to appear at the May term of the Superior Court, fixing the bonds at $100. Another of those supposed to have been engaged in the affair is to be tried next week. INOOG.

The Old Mississippi.

The work of demolishing the old Mississippi is progressing at the Brooklyn Navy-Yard. She is to be rebuilt and have new engines placed in her of 1000 horse, and not copper as before. Many of the soldiers who served in the war with Mexico entertain a great affection for this steamer, as it was from her that Gen. Scott, with the New-York Volunteers and other troops, landed near Vera Cruz, in 1847. A large quantity of wood from her upper works has been carried away as "mementos." The 8 floors have passed in her while going at a small pace through the Gulf, are all forgotten, now that she is being demolished.

OBITUARY.

Death of Mayor Fernandez of Albany.

From the Albany Journal, March 15.

Hon. William Parmalee, Mayor of our city, who has, for more than two months, suffered painfully and patiently, and with the fearlessness of his nature, confronted by his own convictions, that his malady must terminate fatally, expired at half-past 4 o'clock today. Although this event has been daily and almost hourly anticipated throughout the city, it will fall heavily, not only upon the circle of friends immediately connected with him, but upon a community with which he has been so long and so well known relations associated.

Mr. Parmalee was a native of Lansingburgh, where he was educated in an Academy of which Hon. Ira Harris, now a member of Congress from Essex County, was principal. He graduated at Yale College in 1817, and was admitted to the bar of the State of New-York in 1820, and commenced practice in this city. In 1823 he was appointed City Attorney by the Common Council, and in 1829 he was appointed [illegible]

[illegible] will, in future, enjoy not only all the advantages of Dr. Hunter's advice, but the additional benefit of the personal care and supervision of skillful and accomplished resident physicians.

In the Specialist and Journal of Diseases of the Chest for February an extended explanation of Dr. Hunter's views and treatment will be found, with much additional information, which should be read by every one predisposed to or suffering from any affection of the throat or lungs. The Specialist can be procured of the publishers, Messrs. Sherman & Co., Astor House. Persons residing at a distance, who are prevented by the state of their health, the weather, or other considerations from visiting the City for advice, can be prescribed for by letter. In such cases, it is necessary that the patient should carefully describe his present symptoms and the past history of his disease. To render such description more exact, a list of questions has been prepared, which will be sent, with a specimen copy of the Specialist, on application to either of the following addresses:

NEW-YORK—Dr. Robert Hunter, No. 629 Broadway.

BALTIMORE—Dr. J. B. Williams, No. 52 North Charles-street.

Note.—Dr. Hunter may be consulted personally as heretofore, from 9 A. M. to 4 P. M., daily.

LONG ISLAND.

Excitement.

Brooklyn was thrown into a feverish state of excitement on Saturday evening last, by the arrest of a young woman in male attire, under the nom de plume of Frank Shanley, who had for several hours perambulated Fulton-street, and visited various saloons on that thoroughfare. She was arrested by Officer Mark, of the First District Police, and taken by him to the Station-house, where she was committed for examination. The fact of this young woman being a native of Brooklyn, and driven to her present course of life, as alleged, by an unnatural father, no doubt has much to do with the sympathy which was loudly manifested for her about the Station-house.

☞ Dr. Doremus has commenced a course of four lectures on Chemistry and the Creation, in the Packer Institute, Brooklyn. The first was delivered to a house crammed full of the élite,—the aisles, lobbies, and so forth, no less than the seats, being filled. The Doctor's exceedingly popular method, and the brilliancy of his experiments, draw admirably.

MONDAY, March 17—A. M.

We have received, and publish in another place, a notice from Mr. C. Vanderbilt, the manager of the Nicaragua Transit line of steamers, to the effect that the ships are, for the present, withdrawn, in consequence of the extraordinary conduct of General Walker, in seizing or taking by force the property of American citizens. The ships, it is stated, will be laid up, until the Government has sufficient time to examine and look into this outrage committed upon the property of the Transit Company. In the meantime, Mr. Vanderbilt adds that he does not consider passengers or the property of American citizens safe on the transit of the Isthmus of Nicaragua, and he cannot be instrumental in inducing either to take the passage. We are induced to hope that no serious inconvenience to passengers or gold shippers will result from this sudden step. The Uncle Sam steamship on the Pacific, leaving San Juan del Sud about the first of March, would have to San Francisco the news of Walker's proceeding, and this should arrest the further shipment of treasure by the route—already reduced to less than $600,000 the trip—while the other steamer leaving San Francisco on the 5th of March will connect with the Star of the West on this side. If the Uncle Sam should return on her regular day, March 20, with any considerable amount of passengers, their case will be a bad one, unless the New-Orleans ship is sent to their relief. The chances are, however, that the risk will not be taken at San Francisco.

The course of Stock and Money affairs the past week was less steady than during the previous fortnight. Prices on the Stock Exchange were first depressed, early in the week, by the unfavorable effect upon the March traffic of the Railways from the renewal of snow storms and freezing weather out West. Upon the business of the present month, liberal calculations had been indulged to make good the drawbacks from the severe weather in January and February, as it was known that Produce at the West and Merchandise at the East had accumulated in large quantities awaiting transportation. But the first week in the month and a portion of the second have been lost by the embargo from the snow storm, on and near the Lake Shore. Following this course of depression came the news from Nicaragua of the confiscation of the charter of the Transit Company, which created intense excitement in the Street on Thursday and Friday, and besides knocking down the Transit shares 96 to 68, injuriously affected the entire Stock list, until Saturday, when, from the calmer feeling on the Nicaragua affair and the tone of the Foreign letters received in the Arabia's mails, there was a marked reaction. A rise of 2 ⅌ cent. on Illinois Central Bonds with very heavy sales, resulted from the London report that large parcels had been taken as high as 84@84¾ ⅌ cent. sterling, for the Holland markets; equal to 91@92 per cent. federal money. There was also a recovery of 1@1¼ ⅌ cent. in Erie Road shares, and the general list closed firm in the afternoon. We annex the

The Foreign Trade returns at the port of New-York for the past week show an Import of Foreign Goods, including the Dry Goods summary in our last paper, of $3,094,614 against $1,961,789 the corresponding week last year, and $4,188,851 the year before. The Exports of Domestic Produce and Miscellaneous Goods amounted to $1,338,841 against $857,647 same week last year. The Export of Specie entered at the New-York Custom-House amounted to $278,661, the whole by steamer Baltic for Liverpool on Saturday. There was an Export from Boston on Wednesday, of $300,600, the bullion being sent from this City by express. These two sums make $574,261 for the week, against the sum of $1,267,855 shipped the corresponding week of last year via Boston. The deliveries of California Gold for the week amounted to $1,491,646. The increase of Specie in the Government Office in this City for the week amounted to $220,952, the balance in all departments on Saturday afternoon being $12,908,769 against $12,712,817 at the close of the previous week. As the California receipts did not get into Bank until Saturday, and the business of the week commenced on a declining average, a reduction of the Bank revenue may be looked for on the statement to be made up this afternoon as compared with the average of the previous week, which stood $15,170,994. Suppression of Important News.

Your Mr. Crane may fancy that he has sufficiently answered the charge of foul play with the New-Orleans dispatches on Thursday, but the business public down town will hardly believe so, without further explanation. The case is even worse than the Halifax steamer. The Nicaragua news was received by the David Webster at New-Orleans on Tuesday, March 11. Private dispatches, dated on that day, and marked as received here on the evening of Wednesday, the 12th, were in private hands early on Thursday morning. There was not a whisper of the Webster's arrival in the Associated morning papers of Thursday. Where were your dispatches between Tuesday, 11th, and Thursday afternoon, 13th, while other advices came through, on Wednesday? If they were placed in Mr. Crane's hands too late on Wednesday night for the use of the papers, or not received at all until Thursday morning, I ask in the name of common enterprise and honesty, if they were not important enough to place at least the simple fact of the arrival of the steamer on your bulletin boards. That would have saved part of the public concern and loss growing out of the momentous nature of the news. It would have so far confirmed the private dispatches which were understood to be in town, as to put the country on their guard against unfair advantage being taken of the news. But it was next to impossible to learn at the newspaper offices or at the telegraph in Hanover-street whether or not a steamer from Nicaragua was really in at New Orleans. Inquiries made as late as one o'clock could not be answered. But the fact did get out, and as one of your afternoon neighbors reported through the Associated Press. It has been stated also that Mr. Charles Morgan sent in word to the Transit office early on Thursday that the steamer was at New-Orleans, and that when asked how he learned the fact, he replied as above.

It is to be hoped that such arbitrary and suspicious proceedings on the part of one who signs himself the Agent, but really appears to be the master, of the Associated Press of New-York, will be put a stop to, if there be any way of doing it. The nuisance is really growing to be intolerable to the public, besides bringing reproach upon the enterprise of the New-York papers. A. B.

Insuring Rents Against Fire.

I observe under your money article of this morning, a notice of a recent circular of the Liverpool and London Insurance Company, in which they offer to insure rents against fire, and in which you speak of it as a new feature in insurance.

Permit me to remark that it has long been practiced by the older companies of the City, and if I mistake not, by the newer ones also. It certainly has been quite extensively for the last twenty years by the Company of which I am an officer, and its principle is well understood by most of the large owners of Real Estate in this City.

AN INSURANCE SECRETARY.

The Excelsior Company Insure Rents.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

Allow me to solicit the correction of a statement, or rather mis-statement, made in the Times' money article of this morning.

In noticing the Circular of the "Liverpool and London Insurance Company," respecting the insurance of rents against loss by fire, you say that the "principle is a new one."

This remark, if it be your own deduction, is as unjust as it is injurious to the many local Companies that have, for years, insured against loss of rents by fire. If it is a suggestion, or rather if the principle is claimed as a new or original one by the parties noticed in your paper, it deserves serious reprehension—for the claim, either as to novelty or originality, is unfounded. This Company, for one, has not only insured rents, but leases, &c., since its organization. And while we of the Companies that are "native and to the manor born," frankly and cheerfully acknowledged the rights of our foreign brethren to participate in our business facilities and profits, and even to avail of the fruits of our experience, we cannot allow such an evident "theft of thunder"—whether intentional or not—to pass unnoticed.

We believe, and as far as the "Excelsior Fire Insurance Company" is concerned, we know, that the principle of insuring rents, on a much simpler basis or form of policy than on terms equally liberal as those noticed by you, has been operative for years.

In this respect, Sir, as in all others, our desire is merely to be set right before the community, in a matter of business interest to that community as well as ourselves.

EUGENE PLUNKETT, Vice-President.
